July Luncheon reviewed

Paul Sheahan captivated the audience in his address at the July luncheon while he gave an insight into his 'Fortunate Life'. With an interesting upbringing in a traditional Protestant home in Werribee, overcoming knock-knees at an early age and attending school at Geelong Grammar, he later pursued a career in Education. Paul fondly recalled for the audience a memory of endlessly fielding at the Soldiers Reserve practice in Werribee twice a week when he was young and although he was obsessed with sport from that young age, his passion in later life was not Cricket but instead Education. After he matriculated in maths, Paul taught at various schools while he played cricket for Australia. Remembering instances of character building where he would finish a test match and return to work the next day to be riled by his co-workers for the disappointing result on field. He believes with certainty that intellectual achievement has been the driving force in his career: to see young people achieve something they thought they never could greatly inspires him. Even while playing for Australia he continued to state that he was an educator first and a cricketer second. Paul's departing remarks were that it is never too late to be what you might have been.

August Luncheon reviewed

Dr Robin Hirst gave an amusing and informative lecture about how museums have changed from Victorian times to the present day. In contrast to the modern day, he said, in Victorian times people were content to just look at exhibits and read notes about what they were seeing, These days modern technology allows exhibits come alive for people to 'experience' events which hitherto they could only read about. He showed pictures of the first museum in Melbourne and its founder Professor McCoy, noting that some exhibits were similar in content and arrangement. He likened the museum experience to the TV character Dr Who's telephone box time machine and used the word 'tardis' in the title of his address. The meaning of 'tardis' being 'a place that is much bigger than it looks from the outside' and which characterises a museum which is a relatively small building, housing the history of the earth and mankind.
