The Hon Dr Kay Patterson

Wednesday, 6 April 2011

Noon for 12.30pm

220 Leicester Street
Carlton

TOPIC: REPAIRING BODIES. REBUILDING LIVES

Dr Patterson was elected to the Australian Senate in 1987. Prior to entering the Senate, she managed a small business before attending university and attaining a PhD in Psychology. She has taught at Sydney and Monash Universities and held senior academic positions including Chairman of the School of Behavioural Sciences at the Lincoln Institute (now at Latrobe University).

She was elected to the Senate in 1987 and in Government held a number of executive positions including Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Immigration and the Minister for Foreign Affairs. In 2001, she was appointed to Cabinet as Minister for Health and Ageing, and then in October 2003 Minister for Family and Community Services and Minister Assisting the Prime Minister for Women's Issues. She retired from the Cabinet in 2006 and from the Senate in June 2008.

She was a member of Monash University Council for twenty years and has been a member of Guides Australia since she was 10. In 2002 she was honoured to be appointed an Honorary Life Member of Guides Victoria. She is Director and Vice-President of Interplast Australia New Zealand, Director of the Brockhoff Foundation and Vice-Chancellor's Professorial Fellow at Monash University.

March Luncheon reviewed

Emeritus Professor Bruce Holloway

In his address on the Genetics of Human Behaviour, Professor Holloway touched on the genetic variations which result in all living creatures being different. Changed environmental conditions result in changes to DNA with a changed gene having selective advantage in the process called evolution.

The audience learnt of some aspects of genetics and the many types of genes which dictate human behaviour and noted that animals share many genes with us. Professor Holloway gave as an example of gene disorder a rare genetic condition known as the Lesch-Nyham syndrome which affects young children and leads them to self-harming behaviours.

There are also genes affecting our interaction with others, e.g the chemical basis of love, resulting in the natural production of genes for biological purposes and to ensure continuation of the species. Another gene is the FOXP2 which is the basis for communication and a disorder within this gene can cause speech abnormalities in humans. Professor Holloway also spoke of the DRD2 gene which is known as a 'risk-taking' gene. It is found predominantly in males and associated with compulsive behaviour. It is common in alcoholics and drug addicted humans. Professor Holloway pointed out that in the past this was a very important gene to the human tribe. Tribal members with this gene would have been the ones brave enough to face the prey during the hunt for food.

Professor Holloway answered quite a few questions from the audience on various aspects of his address, before wrapping up his presentation.
